(First time sailboat owner) I recently traded for a 1970 Macgregor 21 (Believe it was called a Venture in that model year). Unfortunately, when I arrived to make the trade, the owner had lost the sails. Given the drive, and the deal, I still traded, but now I have to find sailing and I try to do it on the cheap if possible? I'd love to get ahold of an old set from someone who upgraded sailing (just so I can get out on the water and practice sailing), but I don't know how specific I should be in finding the right size sailing, and if I need to be specific, what specs do I need are? (First time sailboat owner) Best place to start would be the Macgregorsailors.com forum probably not much to find here. Chances are you have to bite the billet and buy a new set, but the good news is that they are considered relatively cheap all things. Bluewater yachts in Washington is another place to start searching. Good luck. 08-11-2017, 17:57 #3 Registered User Date: 2017 Messages: 3 Re: Macgregor (Venture) 21' Sails? Keep the bottom and keel smooth, which things can get on a plane offwind. 08-11-2017, 20:43 #5 Registered User Date: 2017 Messages: 188 Re: Macgregor (Venture) 21' Sails? I'm looking for some rails and a few other things that I could match with the original accessories on the boat. I did some searching but came up with generic sites. is there any sites out there that I can put in the make and model of the boat and get a list of parts available? the boat is in good condition, but it needs a few little things. markaram Deckhand Posts: 36 Joined: Sun 07 December 2008 8:48 Sailboat: MacGregor 21 Post by markaram » Sun 28 December 2008 10:56 Hello sounds like your v21 is in and ready. I'm actually in a similar sit. with a Mac 21 that is in good condition and highly navigable. Concentrated on rigging solidity, hull condition and looking to install rope couplings for halyards going behind. my boat has no rail handles and I think it's ok without them. it has a safety line going around the boat and that with sperry shoes makes going forward a pretty safe thing. How's your swing keel? sanding and painting with por15 would be a good project if it is not already done. I have to do that with my lurking. you could always estimate the size of the handrails and have them made in Layers. by a cabinetmaker. they would require several through hull screws with backing plates and I wouldn't do it at this stage. would you know of a perfect fitting porty potti toilet for the mac or v21? I also found Catalina Direct to be very helpful. Many parts for Catalina 22's fit the Ven-Macs. For generic parts, the least expensive I've found is Defender Marine. lou sailor yes Chief Steward Posts: 82 Joined: Sun December 14, 2008 11:14 Sailboat: Venture 17 Location: Richmond VA Contact: Contact sailor yes Post by sailor yes » Sat January 3, 2009 10:02 Thanks for the links and the help. I have one more question to see if you all know anything about this. I'd like a deep-dign. I've found a few different options. I see that a popular option is to do a through the hull mounting of the sounder and I am very skeptical about putting any holes in the boat. maybe there is an option of putting the sounder on the swing keel? it looks like it can be drilled and tapped to mount it. if not would you put the sounder on the stern of the boat do well? also keep my swing was sanded and repainted a few years back by the previous owner so no repair is needed there. I have no idea what I need and what I need at this point. I don't have a book on the boat and I've never sailed before. I'm going to take a course on this, but in the meantime I'm trying to get the boat ready to sail. any pictures of what the boat should come up with or a list would be greatly appreciated.... Thank you!! Josh Heinzir Engineer Posts: 100 Joined: Wed 29 Oct, 2008 21:01:01 I have .pdf files of a 1975 Venture price list (all models) as well as brochures for the Venture 17, Venture 21 (two versions) and Venture 23. The price list is particularly interesting because it shows what options were available at the factory at the time. I tried uploading them here but couldn't attach the .pdf files. PM me with your email address if you want a copy. I would go with locally supplied parts for my Mac 21 for replacing standard items plus the options to use for a 21 are pretty slim if any. The more you get on the water with your boat, the more you learn and gain confidence. I found the boat to be easily rigged and ready to sail in about 40 minutes even with one person. It is a training raising mast singlehanded and a 10 ft long mast stool placed near the cabin entry can help, while raising the mast to about half ways up. the rest is easier to complete after you do. A great day sailor with the ability to stay overnight for 1 or 2 people and it sails fast with excellent stability of that deep lead keel. I love to talk about this boat... I'd like to add a few things to the boat that were once options when purchasing them. maybe I can find a junked v21 to pull some parts of it. Of.
