"you will be made to dance as a punishment for all your crimes !" In the second chapter of the Chicken Invaders saga, a war between the chickens is sparked off when those chickens' spirits are spliced into the personality of the last human being in the world. The humans then create the chicken simulator in an effort to find a way to defuse this new threat to the dominance of their species. "And then ... the chickens ... will triumph !" In the third chapter of the Chicken Invaders saga, the chickens have defeated the humans, but their victory is short-lived. The humans have programmed the chickens with the ability to become invisible, and have now hatched an evil plan to eat all the chickens. In order to survive, the chickens fight back by becoming invisible as well, and in the process, inadvertently create the world's first chicken-human hybrids. It is revealed in the fourth chapter that these ... chicken-human hybrids ... are the only ones left to continue mankind's struggle against the chickens. The Chicken Invaders saga is a science fiction novel published in the United Kingdom in 2006. It was written by Richard Dodds and published by Newcon Press. The book is set in an alternate history where humans live in a world dominated by chickens. Plot summary The novel starts with a prologue that tells the story of the very first chicken invasion of Earth, and follows the story of the ... chicken invasion of Earth, and the people who struggle to survive. The story then focuses on the actions of the chicken invaders, and the humans who are trying to fight back. Characters Invaders The main characters in the story are the chickens who have come to Earth to take revenge for the enslavement of their ancestors. Characters from the Invaders Earth The humans of Earth are the original species, and the dominant species of the world. They are portrayed as being fairly unintelligent and cruel towards the chickens. In fact, their society is primarily based around keeping the chickens in line. Most of the men are soldiers who fight against the invading chickens. The other human characters appear to be the dominant species, but in reality, it is the chickens that are actually the dominant species. They manipulate the humans so that they can invade the world. The humans don't seem to have any means of defence. There are some types of equipment, but they are heavily 520fdb1ac7
