

Stephanie Scheller is an award-winning entrepreneur, internationally acclaimed keynote speaker, and TEDx presenter known for creating unforgettable onstage experiences that change how audiences think, focus, and perform.

Blending neuroscience with live violin performance, Stephanie designs keynotes for how the brain actually works. Her work is built for the ADHD i-OS, helping audiences stay engaged, retain information, and leave with ideas they can act on immediately. Rather than a gimmick, her violin is a neuro-based tool she uses to reset attention, anchor key moments, and create experiences people remember long after the event ends.

Stephanie is a three-time bestselling author, a television show and music video producer, and the founder of Grow Disrupt, a company internationally recognized for producing immersive, high-retention events. Her work has been featured by Forbes and Chief, and she is a go-to guest expert for KSAT12, KENS5, and WOAI.

She has spoken on stages ranging from Princeton University to major conferences and leadership events, delivering keynotes that combine clarity, creativity, and execution. Whether addressing entrepreneurs, executives, or innovation-driven organizations, Stephanie is known for translating complex ideas into moments that stick and momentum that lasts.

Short Version

Stephanie Scheller is an award-winning entrepreneur, TEDx speaker, and internationally acclaimed keynote speaker who blends neuroscience with live violin performance to create unforgettable stage experiences. A three-time bestselling author and event producer, her work has been featured by Forbes and Chief, and she is a frequent guest expert on major media outlets. Stephanie delivers keynotes that keep audiences engaged, make ideas stick, and inspire real action.