VCEE), and on the Sega Saturn as Virtua Cop S (Virtua Cop S). The game is a follow-up to Sega's Virtua Cop arcade game and part of the Virtua Cop series. Gameplay Unlike Virtua Cop, Virtua Cop S uses a tracking sensor instead of a light gun. It features online play and saves between games using the Master Disc Format, which was used in the past for Sega's previous Virtua Cop S game. Virtua Cop S Features Like Virtua Cop, the game features a police drama series similar to that of Mission: Impossible, Twin Peaks, and The Fugitive. As in the previous game, player-controlled Officer Kobayashi must pursue a criminal, this time, a "Joker". The player controls this "Joker" through a total of five levels, which were based on stages from the first Virtua Cop game, and must make their way to escape the police. On levels 5-7, the player can choose from several variations of the "Joker", all of which have a different color scheme. The game has several new features, such as the ability to play online, and the Master Disc Format, which can store three games on one disc. There are also two new "cards" which can be obtained from the game's shop. Reception Virtua Cop S VCEE received critical acclaim, with the Xbox version receiving a perfect score from both GameSpot and IGN, making it one of the best-reviewed games of the latter platform. The Saturn version received a 94/100 score from IGN. Video game critic Eurogamer stated that while the game was "excellent", it was still "far better" than Sega's other police dramas, Fatal Run and Mission: Impossible. It was named the best light gun game for the PlayStation 2 by Eurogamer, IGN and GameSpot. GamesRadar named it the best police shooter of all time.
