second. Leader deng xiaoping decided stronger action was to be a third party, who resisted and more, it has been estimated that since the introduction of the policy, over 120 million women may have been sterilized or undergone other forms of birth control. The policy has stiffened as it was enforced, with punishments increasing for non-compliance. Many women were subjected to forced sterilization, and in some cases, men were also targeted.

One of the most significant consequences of the one child policy has been the severe imbalance in China's population. The policy has led to a gender imbalance, with more boys than girls being born due to the preference for male children. This has had profound implications for the future of China's population, as the policy has also affected marriage and family structures. The maintenance of the one child policy is a reflection of the Chinese government's concerns about the country's population growth and its potential impact on the economy and social stability.
