The program can perform continuous sequential numerical tracking using optical elements or non-conscience optical tracking of light analysis and physical radiation of protons. Ymax may take into account tolerances and design errors caused by physical limitations or human errors. The Simex optimization tool can improve the design of the lens by minimizing violations, taking into account the automatic parameters. The company has a complete library of types of commercial lenses, optical materials that can be used for optical analysis. The program can be used in optical fibers because of the physical optical properties of devices whose diffraction is very important, such as laser beams and light connections.
