Iceland

Sample itinerary, and day 1

Iceland puts waterfalls, glaciers, black sand and geothermal water within a day's drive of the capital, and the airport is 45 minutes from the city. This sample programme shows how 3 nights can work for an incentive group. Everything can be tailored to your group, your objectives and your budget.

Day by day

- Day 1, arrive, bathe in the Blue Lagoon, dinner at Lava Restaurant
- Day 2, the South Coast, 2 waterfalls, a black sand beach and buggies
- Day 3, the Golden Circle, with river rafting on the Hvítá river
- Day 4, breakfast at leisure, then the transfer home

Day 1, arrival and the Blue Lagoon

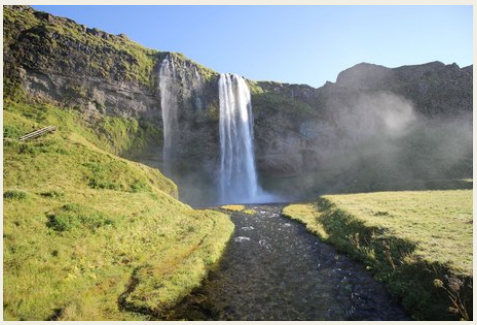

Straight from the plane into geothermal water, which is the gentlest possible start after a flight.

- Transfer from Keflavík airport, stopping at the Blue Lagoon on the way to the city
- 5 hours in total, with 1.5 to 2 hours in the lagoon, for up to 200 guests
- The Premium Pass adds a robe, 3 face masks and 2 drinks at the water bar
- Dinner at Lava Restaurant, built into the cliff above the lagoon
- Stay at Apótek Hotel, 45 rooms in a historic Reykjavík building

Iceland

Day 2, the South Coast and buggies

A full day east along the coast, 10 to 12 hours, for up to 100 guests. Waterfalls, glacier edges and black sand, with a couple of hours of driving in the middle of it.

Seljalandsfoss

One of Iceland's most photographed waterfalls, dropping 60 m from the cliff above the Seljalands river.

- A path runs behind the falls, so the group can walk through the curtain of water
- Waterproofs matter more here than anywhere else on the trip

Skógafoss

25 m wide with a 60 m drop, throwing up enough spray to make rainbows on a bright day.

- A steep staircase to the top, or the walk to the foot of the falls
- Folklore has a Viking settler burying his gold in a cave behind the water

Buggies on the black sand

A guided safari across black sand plains and shallow glacial rivers, at the edge of a glacier.

- 2 hours from Mýrdalsjökull base camp, across the Sólheimasandur sands
- 2 guests per buggy, 17 buggies and up to 34 guests, with the DC-3 wreck on the route
- Lunch at Skálakot Manor, a restored Art Deco country house nearby

Reynisfjara black beach

Basalt columns, sea stacks standing offshore and Atlantic surf, near the village of Vík.

- The most dramatic stop of the day, and the one with the strictest safety briefing
- Back to Reykjavík for dinner at Food Cellar, in a 230 year old building, with live music

Iceland

Day 3, the Golden Circle, and home

Þingvellir National Park

A UNESCO World Heritage site, the original seat of Iceland's parliament, where 2 continental plates meet.

- Walk between the Eurasian and North American plates
- Lava fields, ancient ruins and the clear water of the Silfra fissure

Geysir hot springs

The spring that gave every other geyser its name, in a field of steaming pools and vents.

- Geysir itself is mostly dormant now, but once reached at least 80 m
- Strokkur next door erupts every 3 to 5 minutes, so nobody waits long

Gullfoss

Thousands of tons of glacial water dropping in a double fall into a deep gorge.

- Seen from the viewing platform above, or from the rocks alongside
- The loudest 10 minutes of the trip

River rafting, then home

The Hvítá, fed by the Langjökull glacier, with calm canyons and lively rapids in equal measure.

- 3 to 3.5 hours in total, with about 1 hour on the water, for up to 100 guests
- Wetsuit, life vest, helmet and all equipment provided
- A lamb barbecue at Drumbó river base, then dinner at Apótek Restaurant
- Day 4, breakfast at leisure, then 45 minutes to Keflavík airport
