Types of Chandeliers As much as chandeliers come in the basic design of a hanging stick with branches filled with lights, there are different types and styles of these games out there. Here are some of the designs you'll encounter: Candle - It's a common design with upwards of five arms with bulbs shaped like chandelier. Shaded candles - It's similar to the traditional one above, but each of the chandelier bulbs is covered in a small shade. Glass - Is usually made of glass and is one of the most delicate chandeliers you can overcome. Crystal - This type is usually a substitute of the glasses where the tear bulbs are made of plastic or polycarbonate crystals. Caged - The Bulbs usually included in an intricate metal cage with the lights in the middle. Modern - Usually has an edgy look and the bulbs are not shaded shaded they have a trendy design. Factors to consider when choosing a chandelier, let's explore some of the things to keep in mind when choosing a chandelier. Style – In the market you will find traditional, vintage, contemporary, and modern design. Depending on your taste, you can opt for any of the above to bring out our personal style using the chandelier. Don't be for a complicated item to reach a simple theme. Space – When choosing an electric match, you should consider the space you have available. Some chandeliers are too big that they can take up your entire space and occur disproportionately. Height – Make sure there is enough clearance between where you hang the chandelier and the floor so that people don't hit their heads when they come into the house. If your home has low laying ceilings, you will need a chandelier with a short downrod so that it does not hang too low. Materials and finishing - You will come across a variety of materials such as copper, beads, wood, crystals, and even perform iron. Make sure that the materials and finishing of the chandelier complement other items in your home. Maintenance - As chandeliers hang on the ceiling, they will step up dust and require constant cleaning. Large chandeliers with an intricate design will collect more fabric and are hectic to clean. Closing a chandelier as part of your interior décor will certainly make a statement and illuminate your space in a stylish manner. Hopefully you've gotten some insight on the best chandeliers available in the market and will soon bring some brilliance to your space with a beautifully crafted piece. Piece.
