Written and composed by the band's original tenor, Lew DeWitt, the song reached popularity in January 1966, spending four weeks at No. 2 on the Billboard magazine Hot Country Singles chart, and reaching No. 4 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart. The song won the 1966 Grammy Award for best contemporary (R&A;R) Performance - Group (vocal or instrumental). The Statler Brothers re-recorded the song in 1975 for their first major hits album Mercury Records, Best of Statler Brothers. The song is also featured on Nancy Sinatra's Album Boots (1966). [10] In the film, Bruce Willis' character sings to the line, smoking cigarettes and watching Captain Kangaroo as he drives. In the 1995 film Die Hard in a Comeback, when Willis character John McClane describes his suspension from the police force, he says he was smoking cigarettes and watching Captain Kangaroo. The song was often used as a bumper music for the syndicated radio talk show Coast to Coast AM, especially in the previous days when Art Bell was host. Kurt Vonnegut quotes the song's full lyrics in his 1981 book Palm Sunday calling the song another great contemporary the Statler Brothers and using it to describe the current state of being an American who had recently left their family. This is not a poem escape or a revival. This is a poem about the end of human usefulness, he adds. In the video for the Muppets, a group of rats, the Ratler Brothers, sing the song while a beaker struggles with insomnia after an subject experiment that involved consuming large amounts of coffee. The line of the choir smoking cigarettes and watching Captain Kangaroo has been changed to be for other activities. [11] Nancy Sinatra covered the song for her album Boots. [12] The New Zealand TV program A Dog's Show used an instrumental version of the song. [13] It's a radio series song by Linda Smith, a short time stranger. It tells the story of a man abandoned with the love of his life who finds that he has nothing to do. The song #2 on the Billboard Hot Country Singles chart #4 on the Billboard Hot 100. It later won the 1966 Grammy Award for Best Contemporary Performance-Group (Vocal or Instrumental.) Perhaps due to its quirky lyrics the song is a permanent place in popular culture. For example, in the 1994 film Pulp Fiction, Bruce Willis sings along with a line of cigarettes and watches Captain Kangaroo. This line was also quoted in the 1995 film Die Hard with Vengeance. Fans of late night radio will recognize the song as the theme of offbeat Coast To Coast AM hosted by Art Bell. Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. quoted the full lyrics of his 1981 book Palm Sunday and commented: This is not a poem escape or revival. It's a poem about human usefulness. Commission 201 created a YouTube viral video that has a group of rats, the Ratler Brothers, singing the song as a poor beaker suffering from insomnia. Of course, the reference to cigarette smoking was removed, as well as all references to their competitor Captain Kangaroo. And Nancy Sinatra on Flowers on the wall of her 1966 album Boots. The Statler Brothers were a national, gospel and vocal band formed in 1955. They were originally called kingsmen, but after another band with that name had a hit with Louie, Louie, they changed theirs. Although two of the group members were brothers, none had the name Statler. It was about the brand of facial tissue they saw at the hotel. (And they said their name could just as easily be Kleenex.) They also had backup vocals on Johnny Cash. They were Don Reid (lead vocals), Harold Reid (Don's older brother, bass vocals), Phil Balsley (baritone), and Lew DeWitt (tenor, guitar). Jimmy Fortune replaced Dewitt in 1983. The band had hits on the national charts with Do You Know You Are My Sunshine, Elizabeth, My Only Love and Too Much for My Heart. Written by Statler Brothers singer Lew DeWitt, this song is about a guy who has remained lonely and almost catatonic with the one he loves. He is in a pretty bad place, counting flowers on the wall and playing Solitaire with a deck that is missing the map. It appears on the soundtrack to the movie Pulp Fiction. Bruce Willis sings along with a song that plays on his car radio just before he goes over Marsellus Wallace at the intersection. There is another Bruce Willis connection to the song as well. Willis mentions spending his suspension for smoking cigarettes and watching Captain Kangaroo in Die Hard With A Comeback. — Levittown, NY This was a rare attempt at a psychedelic Country song. Cmt named it one of the 100 greatest Country songs of all time. — Suggestion credit: Julian - Oakland, AR It could be because you're using an anonymous Private/Proxy network, or because suspicious activity came from somewhere in your network at some point.
