The English exam provides some audio samples here. Then you get a 10-minute break... Use this break wisely. Stand up, stretch your legs, use the toilet or have a snack. When you return, you will still have two hours left on the TOEFL exam. After the break comes THE TOEFL Talking. The Talking section is different from previous sections of listening and reading. In this section, you'll answer six questions. The first two issues were independent issues, and the other four were complex. Independent questions focus on your opinion on the topic. The first of these two questions is an open question, for example, What do you think about ...? The second is very similar, but asks a pair of questions where you have to choose a side to agree with or disagree with. Here are some examples: What advice would you give to a friend who travels abroad to study at university? Whether or not you agree with the following statement: All high school students should wear a school uniform. Integrated questions are all different in type, task and time to prepare and talk. All of them are related to passage, and questions three and four also include reading a passage. You will have to discuss and summarize each of them. Here's a breakdown of the four integrated talking questions: There is a table here. Please turn your phone onto the landscape to see it. Here are five things you should take while studying at TOEFL so you can improve your score. It's a test on time! And, each section of the TOEFL lasts somewhere between 30 minutes and an hour. That's why it's important to get used to the clock. When studying at home, ALWAYS do practical tests in a time-limited testing environment. This will prepare you to work under pressure and manage your time on the day of testing. See the time breakdowns above for each section of the exam. If you are struggling, practice without a timer first. Start turning on the timer with your TOEFL studies once you feel more comfortable working under the clock. You won't have access to a spelling check on the TOEFL exam. So you have to practice with the spelling check off! You'll be responsible for finding your own grammar, spelling and punctuation errors on the day of the test, so start practicing it now! This is especially true for the Writing section where you will be writing a 300 to 400-word essay. Give yourself extra time to edit and adjust your answers, since you won't have a spelling there to do it for you. Want more tips on how to tackle the Writing section? Check out our 10 awesome TOEFL Writing Tips throughout the test, one of the most important things to do is take notes! You will need to give yourself a little more time to gather your thoughts and plan your answers. So, during the exam, you should take good notes. So you should practice taking notes about your practice tests too. I can't stress that enough. Note takes importance for each section of the exam!
