[1] In the film, Van Orman is the voice of Flapjack, a naive young boy raised by a whale named Bubble and mentored by a grumpy old pirate named Captain K'uckles. The trio spend their day at Stormalong Harbor. [2] In early 2001, Van Orman gave cartoon network an idea and included his own dreams of his naval adventures while living in Florida as a child. After three seasons and 46 episodes, the series ended on August 30, 2010. Flapjack earned two Primetime Emmy Award nominations, two Annie Award nominations and a Gold Reel Award nomination. Topic Setting: Most characters live in the fictional city of Stormalong Harbor. The city is built in the middle of the ocean on a series of docks with very little surrounding land. In fact it is possible to swim under the city, which is usually done by Bubble. Wealthy citizens live on higher piers with lands that grow in vegetation, while lower classes live lower in the city. Stormalong also has a sewer system and a series of tunnels. The most inhabitants are a kind of sailors and sailors and/or pirates constantly visit from other lands. There is a huge variety of (often bizarre) shops, including a bar that serves sugar instead of Stormalong alcohol (Candy Barrel). The city seems to be relatively dystopian, on a large level of crime and ceasing, and being the only forms of being law enforcement Hag and a relatively small police force. Plot Series revolves around three main characters: Flapjack, Captain K'uckles and Bubble. Flapjack is a young boy raised by a talking whale named Bubble. Flapjack lives a peaceful life until the duo rescues a pirate named Captain K'uckles, who tells Flapjack about a place called Candied Island, which is made entirely of candy. Inspired by adventurous pirate Flapjack, Captain K'uckles and Bubble, they enter strange predicaments and misaventures in their quest for candy. Candied Island and the coveted Adventurer called Adventurer. Three Stormalong Harbors, their place of residence and many strange characters spend most of their home time. Flapjack's biological parents are never seen or mentioned, and there is no explanation for their absence. Flapjack is very naive and unaware of the danger. [3] although he is easily caught in dangerous situations. He respects K'uckles with an extremely high level of respect, his love for the captain sometimes depends on obsession. The motto is Adventure! (when he said excited). It is voiced by the show's creator, Thurop Van Orman. At the end of the final episode, Thurop's son plays the role of Leif Flapjack. Flapjack's original voice actor would have been Paul Reubens, but Reubens did not attend any recording sessions, so Van Orman performed flapjack. Captain K'uckles (voiced by Brian Doyle-Murray) - a former Irish captain who claims to be the greatest adventurer the world has ever been. Nowadays, while he prefers to drink confectionery and maple syrup, past adventures are telling ugly stories and Flapjack is getting wrapped in hi-jinks on his high seas. In reality, his stories are either completely false, or nowhere is he adventurous or surprisingly close as he led Flapjack to believe. The mermaid may not be a completely incompetent adventurer, as she managed to steal the Queen's heart and successfully escaped from her Gone Wishful bodyguards. He's a sugar addict; He'll do whatever it takes to get to sugar. Therefore, she is incredibly selfish, putting herself and above all sugar-in-hand welfare. His often selfish, rude and clearly because Behavior, K'uckles has gained open hostility and Stormalong has earned the disrepute of almost everyone, but it is still respected by other pirates. Although he has a habit of taking advantage of Flapjack for his own needs, he is actually fond of it and often tries to get him out of trouble when a plan of theirs goes too far. He also defends Flapjack, something he does regularly, if others try to trick him. Most of his body consists of wood: his hands are wooden, his legs are latched, and behind him (his sittin' muscle, he calls) a wooden board. It also consists of parts stolen by other pirates. His artificial body makes mechanical noises as it moves through his face. K'uckles spends most of his adventures trying to find Candied Island and Flapjack. Flapjack often had to defend him when he was in trouble. At the end of the final episode, Thurop Van Orman is playing the live-action K'uckles. Bubble (voiced by Roz Ryan) - Anthropomorphic whale, she is the only mother to adopt, loyal to Flapjack's. Bubble serves as both a home and a means of transportation for Flapjack and K'uckles. He does not often endorse Flapjack's desire for adventure, but it will always be won. Oh Brother found Flapjack in a mess boat in the sea after being told. Bubble and K'uckles often disapprove of each other's actions, especially related to 'adventure'. He believes K'uckles is irresponsible, lazy and has a bad influence on Flapjack. However, he is irresponsible and has a consistency of himself in breaking the rules because he is classified as hypocritical by Bubble K'uckles. The song, 100 People Per Population, revealed that Bubble's last name was the same as his first name. Flapjack and K'uckles live in his mouth. Recurring Mint Larry (voiced by Jeff Bennett) - The owner and manager of The Candy Bar, the only place in Stormalong where adventurers can buy candy, as well as the 99 Pence Store (candy tiki, seen in just one episode). Mint Larry is often shown as a beautiful person, but he can also be hasty and at times selfish. Mint Larry is lonely and unsociable, so a candy woman made it called Candy Wife. Even though she has a repulsive adopted daughter named Candy. She loves Candy Wife as if it were real, with many of Stormalong's other residents playing together to make her laugh; Until the Episode of Just One Kiss, the series was deliberately unclear whether Larry had an illusion or a living thing in his mind. She often buys her candy rings that tell everyone she has a taste for expensive items. He's also shown to hate pickles, to hit back at Larry when he's stranded on Pickle Island and puts pickle juice in Candy Wife's drink, pickle juice? I don't even like pickle juice! He was once fired by Dock Hag because he used dead rats as puppets. Larry, he has some grudge against Larry K'uckles, partly because K'uckles brings Flapjack to Candy Bar with constant no money, but mostly because of K'uckles' love for Candy Wife, which is love bugsida. Doctor Julius Barber (voiced by Steve Little) - Stormalong is the current doctor and barber. He's not just a doctor and a barber, he's also a certified sugarologist. Like many characters on the show, Dr Barber has a strange and disturbing attitude. His driving ambition is to perform surgery and give haircuts to as many people as possible. It is not clear whether the urge to operate was due to a desire to help their patients or a highly sadistic nature. His obsession with surgery always directs him to recommend that the simplest medical problems be dealt with in a surgical procedure (very much chagrin to its inhabitants). In an early episode, she appears feeding the hair left over from her clients for a strange monster who lives under her barbershop. Flapjack and K'uckles seem to have a top secret lifestyle, far outside of what they know. Dr Barber sometimes receives shipments from Candied Island. Flapjack sometimes helps Dr. Barber with his insane antics. Although Dr Barber appears to live with his mother, he lives in a dresser drawer and only a voice barber may hear in his head a Norman Bates movie Psycho. Real or not, he seems to be nailing to her about everything. It's often called saying Hmmm, yes. Dock Hag (voiced by Daran Norris) - Stormalong dock law enforcement officer. She is portrayed as a half-aged woman with obvious obesity, and dark brown hair. She is seen falling in love with K'uckles and removes him from the dock tickets by a baby. He never showed it outside his house and is usually cold and bitter to anyone who comes into contact with it. He has a rotten nephew named Lawrence. He has been shown to give them to K'uckles when he has to fill his ticket quota. Even if he doesn't do anything, he gives her a ticket and rules so he can give her more tickets. Mayor May was temporarily fired in the memo, but did not specify that she had been rehired. He won that unofficial beard contest and the hand of Candy. Mint Larry's ugly adopted daughter, and sometimes there are times when the two can be seen together. He basically smokes marijuana. Sally Syrup (voiced by Jackie Buscarino) is a young girl selling Stormalong Harbor seashells. Her name is influenced by the old children's rhyme 'Sally sells seashells on the seashore'. It seemed like a crush on him (he was producing honey when he popped out of his head somehow threw out Sally, Captain K'uckles and Mint Larry said sold for profit). It has been revealed that lovers gnats blood, Doctor Barber reveals all candy barrels. When Flapjack figures you're not in love with her, Sally asks, unfortunately, don't you love me? As he departs, Flapjack is seen taking off his scarf and swinging it onto the ship. Goodbye, Sally Syrup! I don't love you! Sally answers, waving her own handkerchief, and I don't love you! Flapjack then sighs dreamily, despite everything, stating that he can love Sally Syrup. At the end of the episode, he drifted to Blood Island for more shells and survived Blood Gnats. Later, in Sally Syrup's Return, it is revealed that Sally Syrup's father is the Inventor's professor and nephew, who thinks Stormalong's Harbor is boring until Flapjack tries to show him how much fun it can be. She said she really enjoyed it when she had to leave. He and Flapjack shared a moment before they left, when they were in the air and flying. The best thing about today was spending it with you (talking to Flapjack), he said. When you ask me if it's really, no, I'm just kidding! Goodbye, fool! Flapjack then said my heart goes away. Eight-Arm Willy (vocal effects by Richard McGonagle) - an extremely large Giant Pacific Octopus with a cut that sticks out of his head, resembling a hole. Skoolekido was dressed as him to help Miss Leading Flapjack and Captain K'uckles learn left and their rights. In a Willy movie! (Or O?) Flapjack tried to catch him with a group of people from Stormalong's only newspaper so Flapjack could prove to Patch that he was an adventurer and that they could get more ink for the paper, but it seemed that Willy was happy to give them ink and helped Flapjack with his bet as well. Willy is shown to be more than 100 feet tall, making it consistently difficult for Flapjack and K'uckles to steal candy. Off Candied Island, Flapjack and K'uckles try to get candy from Willy's secret sugar stash found in Willy's Sean. Willy has an eye patch on his right eye due to blindness, and he has been shown to be terrorizing Stormalong for years, possibly as the cause of the Sea Monster Alarm. He has been shown to be hostile, but seems to be caring for Flapjack. Sailors Patch (voiced by S. Scott Bullock) - a mustached white sailor hanging out with Thomas, Thomas Hatch (voiced by Kent Osborne) - maligned big-nosed white sailor. In most of the episodes where he appears, he is seen leaving the screen after being upset by someone, and the other Try to comfort him. Satch - a black sailor hanging out with Thomas. The inventor (voiced by Jeff Bennett) is a man who invents things to push child labour and is also the Professor's dastardly brother. He invented a whale called W.O.O.S.H. He invented the camera, but is also supported by children (one of the children has to draw what he saw). Although he is classified as a bad guy forewarning child labour and being vengeful against Flapjack and K'uckles, he sometimes pretends not to be as bad as he seems (for example, when Flapjack and K'uckles try to help him escape from an overweight police officer on the bike by offering them several inventions that they turn away). Sea Urchins (voiced by Jeff Bennett and Kevin Michael Richardson) - Flapjack uses all the dead bubble uses in his bells, so K'uckles takes Flapjack to the bad side of Stormalong Harbor. The two encounter poor street urchin boys who want the sea urchins back but Flapjack call them sissies and the chestnuts follow him and try to fight Flapjack, but are stopped by an angry Bubble who threatens to flatten them if they come near him again. He invites them to dinner, and the shelter and chestnuts rewarded them with a song and dance show. The next morning, however, they learn that the chestnuts have taken away Flapjack's belongings, including his precious collection of bells. Flapjack and K'uckles follow them, and the chestnuts force them into a dance competition. Cheeks, the star dancer of the chestnuts, fell, the chestnut's father steps in to intervene and calls Jerry, the leader of the chestnuts, but then recognizes K'uckles in the bad part of Stormalong Harbour as an idol for a long time because of his ability to do nothing for anyone. Eventually, Cheeks and their father return the bell collection, and Flapjack invites them into Bubble. (Note: In the episode where Bubble is teed down by the Chestnut's attempt to catch Flapjack, Cheeks shows that his real name is Oliver when he named the leader of the chestnuts Ricky). Production: Flapjack tried to catch him with a group of people from Stormalong's only newspaper so Flapjack could prove to Patch that he was an adventurer and that they could get more ink for the paper, but it seemed that Willy was happy to give them ink and helped Flapjack with his bet as well.
