Johnnie will be in Australia in early March, 2018.

Contact him directly for workshops, training and speaking engagements.

After graduating from Oxford in Philosophy and Politics, I first worked as political researcher to Lord Sainsbury and then went into advertising and marketing – first as a copywriter and then as a researcher/strategist. I eventually started my own agency working in the education and financial services sectors.

Over time I became more interested in the human beings and how they worked together than in branding and logos they produced. I trained in a variety of approaches to human relationships, including gestalt psychotherapy and improv theatre.

For the past 15 years I have worked as a facilitator in the UK and around the world, from Singapore to the Solomon Islands.

Client experience includes:

Innovation workshops for the BBC, Channel 4 and Virgin Atlantic

Open Space conferences for National Public Radio (Washington DC), Swinburne University (Australia), Oxford

University, the AHRC, the Mercers Company and Welsh Government

Management Think Tanks for National Public Radio (Philadelphia) and World Vision (Singapore)

Management Retreats for World Vision (Bangkok); the Commonwealth Secretariat, Amnesty International, 38 Degrees and the international OPEN Network

Facilitation Training for World Fish (Solomon Islands), 100% Open, Adaptive Lab, Face Group, World Vision (Bangkok), and the Welsh Government

Management meetings for Screen East, World Vision, Genesis Oil

I am co-author of the book Creative Facilitation. I'm a founder of the Applied Improvisation Network. My work is also the subject of the opening chapter of a book on organisational innovation, Spark. I'm co-founder of Unhurried, which hosts conversations as far afield as Santa Cruz and Sydney.
