Starring Hera Hilmar, Robert Sheehan, Hugo Weaving, Jihae, Ronan Raftery, Leila George, Patrick Malahide and Stephen Lang. An American-New Zealand co-production, the film is set in a post-apocalyptic world where entire cities are wheeled and motorized while practicing municipal Darwinism; its cinematic universe is different from the universe of books. [7] Jackson bought the rights to the book in 2009, but the film languished for several years before it was officially released in 2016. Jackson chose Rivers, who won the Academy Award for Best Visual Effects for his work on Jackson's King Kong, to make a feature-length directorial debut with the project, and brought in several members of his production teams from the film series Lord of the Rings and Hobbit. Filming took place from April to July 2017 in New Zealand. Mortal Engines had its world premiere on 27 November 2018 in London, theatrically released in Australia and New Zealand on 6 December 2018, and in the United States on 14 December 2018 [8] The film received negative reviews from critics, with some praising the visual effects and results, but most criticised the direction, script and lack of personality. [9] It was the largest box office bomb in history,[10] which grossed $83.7m from a production budget of $100m to $150m, losing the studio an estimated $175m. Conspiracy After a cataclysmic conflict known as the Sixty-Minute War, the remnants of humanity regroup and form mobile cities, called Tow Cities. Under a philosophy known as Municipal Darwinism, larger predators cities hunt and absorb smaller settlements in the Great Hunting Ground, which includes the UK and mainland Europe. In opposition, anti-Traction League settlements have developed an alternative it consists of static resorts (traditional, non-mobile cities) in Asia led by Shan Guo (formerly China), protected shield wall. Relics of 21st century technology like toasters, computers and smartphones are priced by historians as Old-Tech. The city of London captures the small Bavarian mining town of Salzhaken, absorbing its population and resources, at the behest of Mayor Magnus Crome. Tom Natsworthy, the apprentice historian, arrives in London's Gut to collect Salzhaken's Old-Tech for the Museum of London. Hester Shaw, a masked twentysomething woman among the Salzhakens, tries to kill Thaddeus Valentine, head of the guild of historians, but Tom intervenes, chasing Hester to the parachute. Hester ran away, but not before she told him valentine killed her mother and scared her face. When Tom informs Valentine of this, he pushes Tom down the chute. Tom and Hester are forced to work together to cross the hunting ground, surviving Southies, Scavs on night hunts, and find refuge in a vehicle called Scuttlebug, but the owners lock them in a cell, intending to sell them as slaves. Hester confides that Valentine killed her archaeology mother Pandora after stealing a piece of Old-Tech she found in a dig at the Dead Continent of America, while young Hester escaped with a necklace given to her by her mother. Meanwhile, Valentine frees Shrike, a reanimated cyborg known as Stalker, from sharkmoor offshore walking prison, to find and kill Hester. Rustwater Slave Market in Outlands, Tim and Hester is rescued by Anti-Traction League agent Anna Fang. During the chaos, they are haunted by Shrike, who Hester discovers he knows. Hester explains that Shrike found her and raised her after he ran away from Valentino, and Hester promised to let him turn her into a stalker like him, but left after discovering that London had entered the Great Hunting Ground, giving her a chance to kill Valentino. In London, Valentino's good-hearted daughter Katherine is estranged from her father, especially after engineer Bevis Pod informed her that Valentine had pushed Thomas down a parachute, and they are learning that Valentino's energy project in the repurposed St Paul's Cathedral is more than it seems. Hester and Tom travel by Anna's Jenny Haniver airship to the air city of Airhaven, where they meet with other members of the Anti-Traction League. After examining Hester, Tom realizes that Pandora discovered the computer core for MEDUSA, a quantum energy super-commodification that the belligerents used during the Sixty-Minute War to instantly destroy entire cities, even though it broke the Earth's crust into a thousand pieces that remodeled the former continents. The Engineers Guild stole the remaining components from Tom's museum workshop and built MEDUSA at Valentine's Behest. Shrike is reaching them, resulting in fierce It critically wounds him and destroys Airhaven. Realizing that Hester was in love with Tim, he freed her from her promise before she died. As Hester, Tom and Anna travel to batmunkh gompe's shield wall with surviving anti-Wolfhounds, Valentine kills Crome in a coup and gets the support of Londoners by promising to destroy the Shield Wall with MEDUSA and take them to a new hunting ground in Asia. Anna convinces Governor Shan Guo Kwan to launch a fleet of anti-Vučist against London, but MEDUSA destroys the fleet and punches a hole through the Shield Wall. After encountering the Medusa stone carving, Hester discovers that her mother's necklace hides crash drive, a kill switch for MEDUSA. Hester, Tom, Anna and the remaining anti-traction lead the assault on London, praising the city's anti-aircraft guns. Hester and Anna infiltrate St Paul's, and although Valentine fatally wounds Anna during a sword duel, Hester destroys MEDUSIs with a crash drive. In a last-ditch effort to destroy the Shield Wall, now crazy Valentine is for his henchmen to kill the city's control team and put the city on full throttle on a collision course with the Wall. With Katherine's help, Tom uses Jenny Haniver to destroy a London motorcycle. Hester catches and fights Valentino on his airship, where she discovers he is her father. Tom rescued Hester and crashed Valentino's boat, which was crushed by London's slowing tracks, killing Valentino. The surviving Londoners, now led by Katherine, make peace with the anti-wolf Shan Guo. As Governor Kwan greets Londoners, Tom and Hester share a hug and head to Jenny Haniver to see the world. [11] Production development In December 2009, October 2016, production began with a feature film to be directed by Christian Rivers, marking his feature directorial debut. The script was written by Peter Jackson, Fran Walsh and Philippa Boyens, while Media Rights Capital and Universal Pictures will finance the film. Filming was due to begin in March 2017 in Wellington, New Zealand. Producers Zane Weiner and Amanda Walker, who both worked on The Hobbit, led the New Zealand team, along with American Deborah Forte. [13] Casting In February 2017, Robert Sheehan was cast in the film for his lead role alongside Ronan Raftery, while Hera Hilmar was cast as the lead female role. Gwen Stefani, Ashley Eckstein and Nicky Whelan were also considered. [14] [15] In March 2017, more actors were announced, including Stephen Lang, Jihae and newcomer Leila George. [16] Hugo Weaving, Patrick Malahide, Colin Salmon and Regé-Jean Page joined the film in April 2017 [17] [18] Richard Armitage was offered the role but died due to scheduling conflicts. [19] The main film photography began in April 2017 and took place at Stone Street Studios in Wellington, New Zealand, and was completed in July 2017 [20] [21] [22] Visual Effects by Weta Digital and supervised by Ken McGaugh, Kevin Smith and Luke Millar. [23] Weta designed mobile cities to real scale in CG, which required dolls that represented different city levels. [24] Release Premiere and mortal engines theatre release had their world premiere at Empire, Leicester Square in London on 27 November 2018. It was released in New Zealand by Universal Pictures on 6 December 2018 and in the UK on 8 December 2018 and then published in the United States As of December 1, 2018, 3D, Dolby Cinema and IMAX 3D.[25][26][27] Box office Mortal Engines earned $16 million in the United States and Canada, and $67.7 million in other territories, for a worldwide total gross of $83.7 million, against a production budget of at least $100 million. [6] Deadline Hollywood calculated that the film lost the studio $174.8 million, when together it accounted for all costs and revenues,[28] making it a box office bomb. In the United States and Canada, Mortal Engines was released alongside Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse and The Mule, and was originally projected to gross $10-13 million from 3,103 theaters in its opening weekend. [5] After earning just $2.8 million on its first day (including $675,000 from Thursday night reviews), weekend estimates dropped to $7 million. It debuted at $7.5 million, finishing fifth at the box office. [29] The film dropped 77% to $1.7 million in its second weekend, one of the biggest drops for a wide release of all time, and finished in 13th place when Aquaman, Mary Poppins Returns and Bumblebee were released during the Christmas holidays. [30] Reception Critical Response to Rotten Tomatoes, the film has an approval rating of 26% based on 186 reviews, with an average score of 4.91/10. The website's critical consensus is: Mortal Engines has no shortage of catchy special effects, but there isn't enough high-octane narrative fuel to give this futuristic fantasy enough cinematic combustion. [31] On Metacritik, the film has a weighted average score of 44 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics, indicating mixed or average reviews. [32] The audience polled by CinemaScore gave the film an average B rating− on the A+ to F scale, while PostTrak reported that the filmmakers gave the film 66% of the overall positive rating and a low 43% definite recommendation; Social media monitor RelishMix noted that the online response to the film was mixed, leaning on the negative. [29] The Guardian film critic Peter Bradshaw gave the film 2/5 stars, describing it as a Steampunk Star Wars, with a little low-octane Gilliam and Gaiman on the side. Bradshaw also characterized Mortal Engines as a tediously frenetic and derivative fantasy-adventure film. Similarly, The Daily Telegraph's Tim Robey awarded Mortal Engines 2/5 stars, describing the film as a mechanical, soulless dystopian theme park ride to nowhere. [34] Variety reviewer Andrew Barker praised mortal engines' opening sequence, but criticised the unwieldy, confusing, exhausting and unintentionally hysterical development of the plot. Praising the film's emotional depth and Junkie XL score, Barker unfavorably compared Mortal Engines to other sci-fi films such as Cloud Atlas and Valerian and The City of a Thousand Planets. New Zealand news website Stuff reviewer Graeme Tuckett awarded 4 out of 5, praising director Christian Rivers for tone, tempo, choreography, sets and costumes, while mentioning the film's references to other series, including Star Wars, Mad Max and The City of Lost Children. [36] Sandra Hall of The Sydney Morning Herald praised Peter Jackson for his social, political and historical commentary by Mortal Engines, awarding him 4 out of 5 [37] Hindustan Times reviewer Rohan Naahar awarded the film 3 out of 5, describing Mortal Engines as a visual, astonishing adventure for children and praising the film's social and political subtext. [38] IGN reviewer Rafael Motamayor awarded Mortal Engines 7.5 out of 10, praising the world's film and visuals construction, criticizing his underwhelming story. Motamayor also praised stephen lang's role as Shrike, considering that he injected some much-needed humanity into an otherwise completely mechanical film. [39] Ben Kenigsberg of The New York Times noted that the film borrows elements from other films, including Star Wars, Mad Max, Matrix and Lord of the Rings. [40] David Fear of Rolling Stone described the film adaptation as steampunk Frankenstein's monster made of spare parts, giving it 2.5 out of 5. [41] Glenn Kenny of RogerEbert.com awarded the film 1.5 out of 4, describing the film's story as ridiculously tricky and kitstic and comparing the film to another box-office bomb, Jupiter Wachowskis. [42] Sandy Schaffer of Screen Rant awarded 2.5 out of 5, praising mortal engines' world design and visuals, but criticizing what she described as her uninspiring narrative and intemperate filmmaking. [43] Author's response Philip Reeve, author of mortal engines, praised the film, stating: Christian Rivers did a fantastic job - a huge, visually awesome action film with perfect pace and a true emotional core... There are many changes in character, world and story, but it's still basically the same thing. [44] The film won the Visual Effects Society Award for its visual effects. At the 17th Visual Effects Society Awards on February 5, 2019, visual effects team Matthew Sandoval, James Ogle, Nick Keller, Sam Tack were honored in the Outstanding Model in a Photoreal or Animated Project category for city design on the go in London.
