SUMMARY

Amon considers himself a “sonic artist”; he perceives sonic arts to be storytelling through sound. Bagged with experience in sound design, live sound reinforcement, music composition and teaching music, he is ever ready to take on new challenges posted to him.

Amon is open to experimentation and developing his craft in other creative musical ways; this has led to collaborations with different artists spanning various disciplines ranging from film to design. Some of his projects include working on a thesis film with Director Jeremiah Oh, recording Republic Polytechnic’s first student album and instrument design for “Irish Circus” and “On The String: Theatre of Music”.

Amon’s industrial experience range from teaching music privately and professionally under different music schools (Faith Music Centre, Intune Music School), freelancing as live sound reinforcement for Church of Our Saviour to sound design and curation for Sonoport’s social media platform Sonigram.

Amon just graduated with his degree in BA(Hons) Music (Electronic Music) and intends to continue collaborating with different artists and honing his skills.
