Reality show Duck Dynasty is all about long beards and guns, but that's not the only thing this extended Louisiana family has to offer. Jace Robertson's wife and the daughter-in-law of patriarch Phil Robertson, Missy Robertson, has teamed up with the Southern Fashion House for her own clothing line, which will feature consciously fashionable casual clothing with more modest silhouettes. Missy seems like a nice woman, and I wish her all the best in this new endeavor. But I'll be honest, my first reaction to the news was the same eye roll I'm usually reserve for news regarding Adam Levine. Why? Reality TV, that's why. It's no secret that fashion collaborations are getting a little out of control. Every morning brings a new announcement of cooperation. Whether it's fashion gone commercial (Missoni for target), celebrity go fashion (Chloe Sevigny for the opening ceremony), celebrity went cheap (Adam Levine for Kmart), or a partnership that's just weird (Heidi Klum for Babies 'R' Us), it seems that all you have to do is get your name on the fashion line to appear on television for longer than five minutes. But even in this collaborative environment, we're more likely to give mega-celebrities a pass. The weight of the celebrity name translate into big sales and big-name employees (Jay and worked with Balenciaga and Balmain, among others), but that's not all. After all, big celebrities are practically fixtures of the fashion industry already. They are dressed designers, they have stylists, they attend events on the red carpet in priceless vintage works, they wear couture in movies and music videos. But reality TV stars? They're just famous for being famous. In order to be filmed 24/7. For being bonkers. We're talking about people whose Wikipedia profiles call them American television personalities. And our distrust of reality reality TV stars for anything other than throwing things at the camera is often reflected in how bad their poor fashion lines do. Just look at how the line Heidi Montag, Heidiwood, has received (Flimsy, panties line molesting dresses ...). Or the short-lived JWwow line, Filthy Couture. Teen mom Kailyn Lowry kinda put out a line of onesies, and Nene Leaks real housewives from Atlanta were apparently designing a line for curvy girls. But let's be honest, it's just tabloid items of interest - not valid fashion news. Reality TV stars simply don't have the infrastructure in place of what their more eminent counterparts do. They're not necessarily rubbing shoulders with Anna Wintour at parties like the girls the girls just did, or dreaming of leather backpacks with Balenciaga like Jay. They have money and they're in the public eye, so when they want to develop something, they can. But just as we love their flail, most of these American television personalities, have no connections - or cultural cach' - a successful venture into fashion. Let's see if Robertson, who comes from a dynasty of smart businessmen, turns out to be different. Image: Getty Images Duck Dynasty has changed the fate of ASE - literally - and therefore the channel has decided to go un-suspend Phil Robertson and start filming the show. On Friday, ASE released a statement saying in part: Duck Dynasty is not a show about one man's views. It resonates with a large audience because this show is about family... family that America fell in love with. As you may have seen in many episodes, they come together to reflect and pray for unity, tolerance and forgiveness. These are the three values that we in the ASE network are also strongly on. So, after discussions with the Robertson family, and consultation with numerous advocacy groups, ASE decided to resume filming the Duck Dynasty later this spring with the entire Robertson family. Robertson was placed on hiatus from the show after homophobic comments to G.H. magazine. Asked what constitutes sin, Robertson said: Start with homosexual behavior and just morph from there. Then he said: It seems to me that the vagina - like a man - would be more desirable than the anus of a man. It's just me. She has a lot to offer. I mean, come on, dudes! Do you know what I'm saying? But hey, sin: It's not logical, my man. It's just not logical.' In a statement, the channel said that Robertson and his family have publicly stated that they regret the rough language he used and the misinterpretation of his core beliefs based only on the article. The rough language refers to the not-apologies of the Robertson family dated December 19, a key part of which was their assertion that we had a successful working relationship with ASE, but as a family, we can't imagine the show going ahead without our patriarch at the helm. Among 18-49-year-olds, the demographic advertisers are looking for the most, Duck Dynasty was the third most popular show on all television in 2013. After ASE removed Robertson, he received support from a number of conservatives, including Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal and Sarah Palin (who later admitted that she had not read the G.D.P.). ASE says the channel will broadcast PSAs promoting unity, tolerance and acceptance among all people. It wasn't that long ago that the reality show ASE Duck Dynasty was one of the most popular on television. While the Robertson family has always been an unlikely group of celebrities, their quirkiness is something that added to the appeal and kept fans watching. For eleven seasons, people couldn't get enough of the duck dynasty world. But then, seemingly out of nowhere in 2016, the Jays made a video ad confirming the end of the series. We decided as a family for this to be the final chapter of the Duck Dynasty series,' he said. Although the family referred to a special or two in the future, so far this has not happened. What brought down the Ducks dynasty? It was a few things. Phil Robertson, Willie Robertson, Jace Robertson and C Robertson Lou Rocco/Wall Disney Television via Getty Images Duck Dynasty used to be incredibly popular at the height of its fame, the show was the most popular non-fiction series in cable history, according to Country Living. But with all the fame came many critics, and, and ultimately, the controversy haunts the family. Duck Dynasty is a reality show documenting the life of the Robertson family. The Louisiana-based reality star made a fortune with the invention of their duck call, Duck Commander. The series was based on Robertson's men and women, including brothers Phil and C, and sons phil Jace, Willie, and Jep, as well as their wives and children. At its peak, the show earned $80 million in advertising sales in 2013, plus $400 million in revenue from merchandise sales, including duck dynasty candles. He also received nominations for the Teen Choice Awards and Critics' Choice Television Awards for Best Reality Show. Ratings began to fall after Phil Robertson made controversial comments although it's unclear exactly why, ratings went way down in 2014. TV Line reported (via Country Living) that season premiere viewers have fallen more than 40 percent from their previous opener. What happened to make people stop looking? It's unclear, but it may have something to do with Phil Robertson's claims that homosexual behavior was sinful during a 2013 interview. It was just one of several cases of Phil bringing up controversial topics. Robertson later defended his position, saying he was a product of the '60s but has since accepted Jesus as my savior. He said, I would never disrespect anyone just because they are different from me. ASE suspended Phil after the interview, but reinstated him to the cast nine days later. The Robertsons are strict conservative Christians and are open about their views both on and off the show. NICHOLAS KAMM/AFP via Getty Images People may have been sick of Duck Dynasty it is unclear whether fans boycotted the show because of Phil's statements, or if they were just bored with the premise. But either way, the Robertson family had already been successful before the show and kept their fortune after it, too. Many actors have moved on to other projects. For example, Uncle Xi got a spin-off show on ASE called, Going Si-Ral. The series lasted one season. They say all good things must end. Despite the fact that the fans Duck Dynasty used to be, they clearly weren't interested in keeping up with the Robertsons anymore. The show followed the Robertson family as they ran their successful duck-challenge captain's duck deal in Louisiana. According to the Washington Post, the show was a massive hit at first, but ratings declined after family patriarch Phil Robertson made controversial remarks about gays and race relations. Those comments got him briefly suspended from the show. But the Robertson family will be just fine, with their business still thriving and the family branching out into merchandising and even political commentary. And they hinted that a few tv specials might be on the way, too. Uncle Xi is filming Willie Robertson in a new series of Going Si-Ral, which tells the story of viral videos and the Internet. But the duck dynasty itself will end after its final episodes air in March this year.
