The thesis is a call for an age-old question in Western philosophy, a question that has arisen several times, each time under very different circumstances: the ontological status of the mind. The Essay of Law dissertation thesis “There are no rights without duties” – Antoine de Saint-Exupéry. There are no rights without duties. The argument here is that this quote is an appropriate summation of what we mean when we say that rights are important. In this essay, the writer argues that we should also examine what our duties to others mean to us. Discuss. “I am aware of your situation, and you may rest assured that the great majority of our people are more than willing to help in every way they can. These people are not looking for trouble, as you are, but they are looking for love and understanding. They cannot help but hear the whining of your voice, because you’ve only asked for mercy, not permission. You have not wanted to see a friend suffer. And yet you have. You have not wanted to see your own self-interest played upon, to use this other individual to satisfy your own ambitions, and you would not blame them if they did. You have not wanted to see your own enemy, your own brother or sister, play the same game. The only reason that the other is going to suffer is because you’re going to do it first. But who are you to suffer? Why are you allowed to suffer? What right do you have to suffer? You have no right to allow your enemy to hurt you. It is you who is at fault. I am at fault. We both stand in our own way. I am not at fault. We are both at fault. And what am I fault for? I am not at fault. You are at fault. You, who are a good person, who is well-intentioned and who would be willing to assist in any way possible, are at fault. You have done something. Why am I not at fault? Because you are the one who is at fault.” – Tao Te Ching. This essay will show why the writer thinks that there is nothing to worry about in this case and how he should just be patient. According to the writer, there’s nothing to worry about because the boy is being victimised, and the more he complains, the more he’s just 520fdb1ae7
