

Policy Statement

Supporting our clients in the transition to a low carbon economy to provide a sustainable future

Monson Consulting Limited has always taken its responsibilities both to the planet and to its inhabitants seriously. Our business depends on our customers, our employees and the earth itself. We are part of the community and recognise that our actions and operations have an effect on the environment. We acknowledge that climate change is a serious issue for the long term survival of our planet and achieving sustainability is a critical step to managing these issues.

We aim to be a responsible business, providing services that meet our customers' requirements. We are committed to contributing to sustainability and understand that this requires the balancing of short and long term business interests, integrating environmental and social aspects into our business and decision making.

We acknowledge that the effects of operations do not stop at our door but are reflected by the actions of clients. We will engage in responsible operations that comply with relevant legislation and codes of conduct and endeavour to engage with and assist our stakeholders and clients to do the same.

It is our ultimate goal to do no harm by reducing our impact and to provide a service that is beneficial to our customers, our employees and the environment.

This policy outlines our guiding principles and is fundamental to the way we do business.
