About the author: Dale B. Khan has been a lecturer at Ball State University for 30 years. He is currently an emeritus professor of health sciences at the Department of Physiology and Health Science. Khan holds a doctorate in health education from Ohio State University, a Ph.D. in sports administration from Ohio University and a bachelor's degree in psychology from Allegheny College. He has been published in various professional health-related journals and has been an active member of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance, the American School Health Association and the American College Health Association. Khan led college students on educational trips to China, Korea, Japan, England and Australia. In 1998 and 2009, Ball State awarded awards for teaching at Khan University. In 2002, Khan was a visiting scholar at Harris College Manchester at the University of Oxford in England. He still enjoyed many outdoor fitness activities, including hiking and running. Ellen B. Lucas (formerly Mauer) has been working at the Ball University Counseling Center for the past 13 years. She is currently deputy director of the Advisory Group and coordinates the centre's outreach and advisory programmes. Her area of expertise is with eating disorders and she has been in private practice treating a wide range of psychological disorders for the past 13 years. Mauer holds a doctorate in psychology counseling from the University of Missouri-Columbia, a Master of Arts degree in counseling with a specialization in student staff at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of California, Davis. She is a licensed psychologist and co-president of the Eating Disorders Task Force in Indiana. She has made numerous presentations in areas such as stress management, self-esteem, eating disorders and depression and suicide at local and public broad conferences. She has published articles on career-related topics in various magazines. She is a member of the American Psychological Association as well as the Academy of Eating Disorders. She loves to travel and lived in Australia and traveled a lot. She also loves fitness activities and has been an aerobic instructor. Wayne A. Payne was a professor in the Department of Physiology and Health Sciences at Ball State University for 32 years. In 2003 he became an honorary member of the faculty. Payne holds a doctorate in community health education from the University of Tennessee, as well as a bachelor's degree in health and a bachelor's degree in biology from the University of Tennessee. State of the Ball. Payne also has an R.T. radiographic certification. He also completed a preclinical course in gross anatomy, physiology, histology and biochemistry at Indiana University School of Medicine. During his training at Ball State University, Payne taught a variety of health-related courses, including personal health courses. Central to his teachings was a deep interest in the role of health, as it relates to growth and development in young and middle adulthood. Dr Payne also taught in England and in the German Ministry of Defence. As an emeritus professor, Payne is still involved in the study of many health-related topics and their impact on adult life experiences, and also enjoys opportunities for family interaction, exercise, travel, recreational reading and volunteering in the cardiology department of his local hospital.
