© 1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates If you got the Bose Soundlink Revolve - Best Bluetooth Speaker Sound for Yourself, but about others on your list? Still have some holiday shopping to do? Then you can consider the G-Project G-Drop speaker. It costs $50, and for that money you probably won't do much better. Why? If you want a speaker of different shapes, you should also read our review of the Yubz Magnum Bluetooth speakers. First, it's IPX7. This means waterproof. I took mine in the shower where I was able to use a built-in hook to hang it from my shower rack. These 4 handles each house button; left to control the track, right for volume. There is also a set of small buttons to hang the speaker, pair it with a new device, and control the equalizer. The last button doesn't have much of an impact on my music, however. Simple enough. However, during the initial installation process I almost split a few nails, since the door is protected by a lock mechanism. Unfortunately, the locking mechanism of my version wasn't centered, which meant that when I turned the lock - which allowed me to do so, albeit very slightly - it meant I was actually locking it up again. So look closely and make sure you line things up as the door doesn't need a lot of torque to open it. To charge this one of the best Bluetooth speaker (via micro USB), or play music from the AUX cord, you will have to open a small door located on top. Read: The best portable speaker pairing speaker is a standard affair with things coming together in seconds. It doesn't look like BLE is part of the G-Drop, which means you won't be able to power on the G-Drop of the app, but it's probably a moot point for most. However, at $50 I wouldn't expect it to have such, but it's worth noting nonetheless. What it has, however, is a 2.5 driver paired with a passive bass radiator. And for size, this thing is more than enough (in sound) for travel, lounging by the pool or perhaps cleaning the mud in the shower. And as mentioned, it's an IPX7 rated, which means it can survive in up to 3 feet of water and run at temperatures as cold as -14F, or as hot as 122F. Finally, the battery is good for up to 6 hours of playback at medium volume, although your mileage will vary depending on how loud you play. If you want one of your own, head to the G-project or buy one straight from Amazon.
