Drift away uncle kracker

Uncle Cracker/Facebook Sometimes artists who don't traditionally label them as country find members of the country music community. Using Kid Rock as an example, the former rapper became a country star thanks to hits such as Picture and All Summer Long with Sheryl Crow. Paul Warner / Contributor / Getty Images Another artist is Uncle Cracker, who most people consider a rock star. But just like Kid Rock, with which he happened to be good friends, crackers found them to be welcome members of the country music community. Cracker's main introduction to country fans came in the form of When the Sun Goes Down, a 2004 duet with Kenny Chesney. How Uncle Cracker came into the country scene The song reached its first place on the Billboard Hot Country Songs chart, reaching number four on the year-end charts. Even today, you can still hear When the Sun Goes Down playing through speakers at pool parties across the country. When the Sun Goes Down is not the only song cracker and Chesney have played together. Around the same time, the duo gathered at one of Chesney's shows for a live duet of Cracker's famous hit Drift Away. Even if you've never heard of Kracker's version, you've probably heard Drift Away before. It was originally recorded by John Henry Kutz on his 1972 album Reunion. The following year, soul singer Dobby Gray recorded it, the biggest hit of his career. Jump in 2003 when Cracker recorded his own rendition of the song. His recording also featured Gray, and the two together to top the adult contemporary chart, remaining on record for 28 weeks. So you can imagine how excited the Knoxville audience was in Chesney's past when crackers strolled onstage and started singing Drift Away. Chesney, like everyone else in the stadium, took part in the performance. Seriously, it looked as if everyone in the audience was singing with crackers and chesneys that day. We would have been hard pressed to find someone in the crowd where you don't know the words of the song! Don't be surprised if you find yourself singing with them.
