The storefront off North County Road marks the first brand location in the state and offers curated beach furniture specifically for South Florida, with customizable options available according to any village. Serena & Lily's team sought the full Outpost of Florida for two years before landing on its current location across Naples, Miami and West Palm Beach. Many factors helped make the decision, store design notes leader An Barz, including a variety of customers, the building itself and the fact that Palm Beach is always in transition. The palm beach-chic island vibe also had a huge impact. It's very similar to [that of] California, where the store originated. The bright and airy shop sports art deco facades that are original to the building. At the entrance, an art piece from Serena Duggan, half of Serena & Lily, hangs above an outdoor living room with all the weather. Numerous furniture vignettes look as if they were drawn straight from a luxury beach house, with each equipped with items ideal for Palm Beach, some exclusively on display in this location. Given the origins of California's Serena & Lily, the creatives behind the seaside brand wanted to set the store apart with a distinctive Palm Beach feel. They achieved this through pineapple details in wallpaper and pillows, sea coral decor and art commissioned by local artists. That is, a space for home furnishings, the store also acts as a gallery where each piece is for sale. Natural ingredients are used wherever possible, from bleached coconut chandeliers and natural fiber carpets to the furniture of the teren and bamboo source from small villages. Serena & Lily works with craftsmen for their thruton items that specialize in harvesting, sorting, shaping materials. The least we can do is give them back the designers at home at the ready to help those who need to decorate the help. They are available to help at every stage of the interior design process, starting with the creation of a mood board and continuing through to the home visitor to complete the project. The store's design center also allows customers to personalized their furniture to fabric, with most choosing a performance option that can stand up to busy family life. More customers can customize with wood clocks and wall coverings, all with beachy theme.> Serena & Lily, 101 N.
