Worlds of music pdf

After years of going head-to-head with peer-to-peer networks from Napster to BitTorrent, the music industry has finally decided to give way. Vivendi's Universal Music Group - the world's largest music group - has teamed up with SpiralFrog, a new music download advertising service, to make its catalog available for free legal downloads in the United States and Canada. The company's business model is based on sharing advertising revenue with content partners such as Universal, while deterring music lovers from piracy. Its intended audience, 13 - 34 demographic, has traditionally been anti-advertising, but used to formula from watching videos on sites like MTV.com and Yahoo! Music. SpiralFrog is pitting itself directly into competition with Apple's iTunes Music store, as well as upcoming services from Microsoft and MTV. I guess we'll just have to wait and see how it all plays out. Travel the world with artists from Asia, Africa, the Middle East, South America, the Caribbean and Europe. Normally, you can just turn on the radio and hear pop songs that are played on repeat to infinity. But what if you want to know what is popular in other countries around the world? We are here to help you achieve this, with a collection of apps and websites that will help diversify your listening habits. 1. Spotify there are numerous ways to find international hits on Spotify. First, go to the view and then the charts and you'll see the options to check out the top 50 by country as well as viral 50 across the country. There are also international charts for viral hits, and you can find playlists filled with songs by genre too. Outside of Spotify View, it's also worth using the search feature. Just enter a request with the name of the country in it. And when you're not in the mood for music, Spotify has other content worth exploring. Download: Spotify for iOS Android (free) 2. SoundCloud SoundCloud is another streaming site that lets you check charts across the country. To get started, go to the website or app. Then look for Orange Explore our Top 50 button. The next screen opens the chart. Use dropout lists from above to filter by country or genre. Note the number of plays listed in the right column, too. Watch the track with a huge number of weekly plays and relatively small performances of all time? This could be the next breakthrough hit. Download: Soundcloud for iOS Android (free) 3. Bandcamp Beloved by many indie artists, Bandcamp features tag-heavy tag-heavy Once you learn how it works, find music from other countries to breeze. Start by searching for the Discover link in the upper right-right direction. On the next screen, find a filter in the upper left direction for the location. Then use the right arrows to scroll through the list of places. Also, check view by clicking on the links in the right corner. There is a location-based tag on the Tag page that shows some of the tags ticking away at the top of the place. However, you can click View All and get even more. The screenshot below shows only a tiny segment of the options. Download: Bandcamp for iOS Android (free) 4. AllMusic Music Study at AllMusic can provide many surprises. Unlike other sites and applications covered so far, this one does not give location-based details. As you can see, many song titles are not in English. The icon under the Stream column for some tracks launches the song on Spotify. This graph can be a good resource if you're willing to go beyond spotify charts. This gives you a bit of guidance without revealing the details of the genre. You can also scroll down past the chart and look for international subgenres and headline styles. Then click the Plus sign to the right of it. This opens up numerous tags for music lovers to explore. 5. Audials This app offers over 80,000 radio stations representing more than 100 genres. It also gives you access to 120,000 podcasts. Even better, there are no advertisements. The app is reported to play any radio station available for streaming. There is also a specific country-based search that you can use to find music from other parts of the world. Even if you only use this app to find music from other countries, it won't disappoint. Download: Audials for iOS Windows (free) 6. TuneIn This website and app offers a variety of audio content, from live sports to podcasts. To find audio from a specific country, select by location from the menu to the left. Select the region from the top of the next screen and then filter out your selection by country. You can also use the search box in the top right corner. This method is a little harder to use if you can't read in other languages. Try typing Top keywords. After entering Top Polish, for example, click on a link for one of the stations. Download: TuneIn for iOS Android (free) 7. Shazam Shazam is best known for its mobile app that identifies songs by listening to them. All you need is to hold up the phone and let Shazam find out what it is. Shazam also, however, offers an impressive streaming service through its website and mobile app. To find international hits on the site, go to Shazam's homepage and Chart. Scroll down to the Top 100 section to see the list of top charts across the country in block style. Want to know what gets noticed in a certain place? Future hits section is worth listening to. Click on the country to see a playlist of hits. No. The track represents the total number of plays, not playable per week. There are also built-in links to go to the song on Apple Music. You can also share the track or go to the song or artist's page. Just click on the menu to the right of each chart entry. It appears when you hover over the track, as does the Apple Music link. Notice the menu to the right of the main Playlist button? It allows you to share the entire playlist through a social networking site such as Facebook or Twitter. Download: Shazam for iOS Android (free) 8. Pop Vortex This site doesn't have a glamorous interface, but it's simple, informative, and regularly updated based on iTunes data. It includes data for audiobooks, e-books, movies and TV shows for some countries too. Click play in the black bar below the cover of any album to hear the song. You can stream a song without installing iTunes, or you can buy a song through iTunes or Amazon if you want to listen to it later. The charts on this site have 100 entries each, and the gray links below Go to the song title are particularly useful. Use them to get deeper into the chart without wasting a ton of time scrolling. You may stumble upon some otherwise buried ear candy. How to discover popular music in other countries? Getting to know the music that people in other countries listen to is easy and fun. You will no doubt find some similarities between your country and other countries. However, you should also expect to hear songs from artists who are brand new to you. Which is amazing.
