Pet furniture as children's toys, too often aesthetically at odds with the minimalist house. After all, what kind of dog accessory can complement your Ames chairs?

Answer: any of these new dog houses Rosie and Rufus. The company was launched in 2012 to focus on furniture for urban dogs (or felines). It's his first collection and Michaela Weingut, one half of the Munich company, said the goal was to turn a standard doghouse, usually found in the backyard, into a piece of interior, modern furniture beautiful enough for a downtown loft or brown stone apartment. Weingut says Rosie and Rufus pieces come in three categories, all meant to satisfy your pet's personality. We started thinking about the different characters of dogs or cats, she tells Co.Design. Based on these thoughts, we have come up with three different incarnations: open, closed, and strange. (For this last, think a private house above a Futon-style tablet or five-point frame of the house.) Americans spent a reported $55.7 billion on their pets last year. Besides food and vaccinations, these costs probably include products from a variety of designers creating accessories for our furry friends such as Batmobile dog beds or experimental hammocks by this muji designer. Rosie and Rufus don't just design eye candy. They play a long game: pillows wash, and the varnish used on the tree is resistant to sweat and saliva. So these tiny huts will keep for years. Homes come in three sizes each, and prices start at about $1,500. The store is here. IKEA IKEA is almost as famous for using illustrated instructions as low prices. And now the company is taking his signature educational style and applying it to the kitchen. A Canadian branch of the Swedish furniture store has partnered with a Toronto-based marketing company, Leo Burnett, to create Cook This Page, which is basically a paint-by-room cooking. Each recipe is printed on a sheet of parchment paper using food-friendly ink and has a sketch of the amount of each ingredient needed for in the dish. All the chef has to do is fill the lines for each item (think fish, salt and lemon). Then, once the food is measured, the page can be rolled up and placed in the oven for cooking. We know it's too to be true. To date, the company has come up with several recipes, including ravioli with Swedish meatballs (um, yam), salmon with lemon and herbs and shrimp with tomatoes and IKEA IKEA Although this concept is not yet on the shelves of IKEA, we can't wait to check it out when it is there. Let's talk about the ingenious concept of a cookbook. This content is imported from YouTube. I got two children's to pull out the bed for free and two mattresses for free, all I paid for is Paint.All I did was saved out of one end so you could sit like on a normal chair with your feet down. Then I used sandpaper and painted it with boat paint in order to keep it better outside. I changed the mattresses and I'm sewing the lid this summer. I just love them, and with the lambs and big pillows it's wonderful to shine and lay on the :) We have a small house, splashing out IKEA solutions. Our family room is a multi-purpose space where kids do their homework, play with all sorts of legos, color, paint, etc. IKEA can make this space much more functional with useful storage for children's things, furniture more suited to space, and some good design. Hello! I'm Anthony and this is my entry into share my cosmic challenge. Well, as you can see, my space is pretty much anything but space! I just moved into this 2 bedroom duplex a couple of days ago and with the exception of a table, bed and bookcase, I have no furniture... 1000 bucks from Ikea would definitely have come a long way to get this place furnished!! First of all, as you can see in the photos, there is no separation between the living room and the butt of the ugly kitchen. I would like to have something to separate these two areas. I plan to get a 5x5 Expedit bookcase to share space and give me an area to put these books, CDs and DVDs so I can junk that crappy bookcase. There's not much room for a sofa and loveseat in the living room, so I would put a small modular and nice chair there to give myself and guests somewhere to sit, and the carpet area would be great for covering those ugly floor tiles. It's a cheap little entertainment center you see won't even support my 42-inch LCD TV, so it has to go!! The Tobo TV panel with media storage will look great in this area. If you look at the pictures bedrooms you will notice that there are no closet doors!! I think some panel curtains will cover this area nicely! Some time ago I had a Malm bed that I had to sell on Craigslist to go through some tough times and I wanted to get another one! The second bedroom/office is just like the bedroom, no closet doors!! Cabinet!! More panel curtains!! I also like to put a futon there in case I have any nightly guests and some artwork on the walls to spice up the room. Well, that's it! Thank you to everyone who votes for me!! Our editors self-research, test, and recommend the best products; You can find out more about our review process here. We may receive commissions for purchases made on selected links. Super functional and seriously chic, daybeds add a layer of style and purpose to any space you place them in. In addition, it is easily accessorized with throw blankets and pillows, making it a chameleon piece that can turn into the shape of just about any decor.
