He was the winner of the 2003 Newbury Medal. which completes the trilogy, Crispin: The End of Time, was released in 2010. Plot In 1377 AD England, a 13-year-old boy, known only as as the son of Asta, lives as a farmer in the village of Stromford. His village is part of the territory of the feudal Lord Fournival, which in the absence of Fournival is under the control of the superintendent John Aycliffe. When his mother dies, Asta's son is left alone, as he has no other known relatives. Soon after, Aycliffe falsely accuses him of stealing and declares the wolf's head, which means that he is no longer considered a man and anyone can kill him. Aycliffe also offers a big reward for his death. Asta's son turns to lead Crispin the village priest, Father Kwinek, his only friend. He shows his father a lead cross, which his mother gave him before his death. Father Kwinel reveals that his real name is Crispin. He promises to reveal the truth to Crispin about who his father was the next night, but before he can, Aycliffe's men killed him. Aycliffe then sends the boy to lead Crispin into an ambush, forcing Crispin to flee the village on his own. Escaping from Aycliffe and his men, Crispin meets an abandoned village where he meets Orson Hrothgar, but people call him Bear, because of his body and strength. The bear demands Crispin for himself, as under the law, if someone runs away from his master illegally, the next free man who finds him can become the master of that person. He learns about Crispin's lead cross and notices the inscription on it. Bear is rough with Crispin, but during their travels together, a true bond of friendship develops between them. Bear eventually asks Crispin if he wants to be his apprentice, and Crispin happily agrees. Posing as father and son, a journey towards the city of Great Wexley, the capital of Lord Fournival's land. Bear insists that he has important things to do to complete there. When they arrive, they find trouble waiting for them. Lord Fournival died and John Aycliffe arrived. Bear and Crispin stay at the Green Man Tavern. In the room, there is a false wall, which Bear says Crispin will be his stash if things go wrong. The bear meets John Ball, a priest in the city. Soldiers come and attack the secret meeting place of Bear and John Ball, taking the prisoners with them. John Aycliffe was looking for Crispin, who is in hiding. The oppressed Crispin discovers that he is the son of Lord Fournival. Crispin is trying to get the help of the Brotherhood, an organization Bear is a member, and led by John Ball. When they refuse to help Crispin in an attempt to find the Bear, Crispin takes over to break into the palace of Fournival and find the Bear himself. Crispin finds a dagger in one of the corridors and holds it under his cloak. He walks into a large room and sees a picture of Lord Fournival, which is very similar to him. When he finds Aycliffe, Crispin presses him to the ground and puts the dagger around his neck, but instead of killing him, he swears under oath that he (Crispin) and Bear will be able to leave the Great Wexley unharmed never to return in exchange for Crispin's cross lead. Crispin is led to the Bear, who is held in the basement of the palace and tortured. Despite the weakening, Bear manages to leave the palace on his own. Aycliffe and a group of soldiers escort them to the city gate, where he renounces his oath and intends to kill Crispin. Between Aycliffe and Bear, who was given a Dagger dagger found in the palace, a fight broke out when soldiers surrounded them with swords. After the battle back and forth, the Bear eventually squeezes Aycliffe from behind, forcing him to drop his sword and dagger. When the Bear throws Aycliffe into a row of soldiers, Aycliffe repeatedly pierces the soldiers' swords and dies. Crispin leaves a cross lead on Aycliffe's bleeding chest as he and Bear emerge from the gates of Great Wexley. Behind the gates, Bear and Crispin play music and sing, and for the first time he feels Crispin instead of Son Asta. Crispin is a 13-year-old serf and peasant boy who lived in the rural English village of Stromford in 1377. The book is written from his point of view. The son of Asta and Lord Fournival Asta is Crispin's mother and the youngest daughter of Lord Douglas. Forced to live serfs when Crispin was born out of wedlock by Lord Fournival. Her death triggered the main story. Lord Douglas is the father of Asta, Lord Fournival, the Lord of the Great English Territory, which includes Stromford. Crispin's father was born out of wedlock. Died while Crispin and Bear were on their way to the Great Wexy. Lady Fournival as Wife Lord Fournival Orson Hrothgar (Bear) - spy of the secret uprising of the brotherhood. Works mobile jester. I bumped into Crispin shortly after Crispin escaped from Stromford. The bear forced Crispin to take the oath of office, leading to a genuine friendship, and Crispin became his faithful disciple. Father Kwinel is a friend of Crispin's, his mother and a priest, murdered by John Aycliffe to hide that Crispin's father is Lord Fournival. Goodwife Peregrine - An elderly woman in the village seems to be a very wise and mysterious man. At the behest of father Kwinel, she gives Crispin a bag for his lead cross as he flees Stromford. Daventry's widow is a barmaid at the Green Man Tavern and a friend of Bear's, she had seven children and two husbands, but they died of plague or Black Death. Tells Crispin who his real father is. John Aycliffe - Steward from Stromford and a relative of Lady Fernalv, tries to kill Crispin to make sure he retains his power. Cerdic is a boy who tricks Crispin into a trap, he's about Crispin's age, nothing else is really known about him. John Ball is the only historical figure who plays a small role - he and his group are preparing for the peasant revolt of One-Eyed Man - a young man who was teased by Bear, and later helps soldiers arrest him at the reception according to Kirkus Reviews: The characters are somewhat less developed than the situation; Although the revolutionary and often mundane Bear is a fascinating treasure. Crispin himself staggers along, moving from milquetoast to restless rebel boy courage and conviction in fits and begins, driven by plot needs rather than organic character growth... despite its flaws, this proposal is nevertheless a solid adventure and can serve as a point of study in times of great political upheaval. Anita L. Burkam wrote in The Horn Book Magazine: Avi writes a fast-paced, packed-in adventure, comfortably immersed in his fourteenth century, giving Crispin a realistic medieval worldview, even undermining his revolutionary Bear arguments. The lack of a name is appropriate because he and his mother, but poor peasants in 14th century medieval England. But this thirteen-year-old boy who thought he would lose little soon finds himself even less - no home, no family, no property. Accused of a crime he didn't commit, he could be killed on the spot by anyone. If he wants to stay alive, he must escape from his small village. All the boy takes with him is a newly revealed name - Crispin - and a cross lead by his mother. The discovery of his name - Crispin - only reinforced the mystery. Crispin then met Bear, who helped him learn the secret of his complete identity. And in Bear - a huge, red-bearded juggler, once a spy, and an everyday philosopher - Crispin also found a new father and a new world. Now Crispin and Bear have gone to live their lives as free people. But they don't get far before their past prepares them. To find freedom and safety, they may have to travel to the end of the world - even if that means just before they die. In this gripping sequel to Crispin's Newbery-Award Victory: Cross Lead - the second book in the planned trilogy - Avi explores the themes of war, religion and family as he continues the adventures of Crispin and Bear. For the writer: Presentisms rub my fur the wrong way. TV is particularly guilty of this kind of artistic license, injecting the past with modern day morality. It annoys me. It is a subtle form of historical manipulation, propaganda of modern ideologies. It says that centuries ago, a few people believed in the way we do it now, we just pushed it up the evolutionary scale up a notch. Don't get me ready. I only mention this in relation to TCL. Avi and on the edge of the world, because in the pages of these novels I caught a whiff of things seeping through the character Bear, live and let live, an all-shrewd, ecumenical humanist. TCL is a story immersed in the medieval world, but hints at new world feelings. This novel is interesting from another point of view. Obviously, young Crispin is technically the main character, but after I let the story steep for a while, my mind constantly turns to the character Bear, who, I would say, is a real hero in that inside it the message and character of the book. The bear is a conduit of the author's feelings ... But by scratching my itch, a slight annoyance, by the way, I'll tell you how impressed I am at how Avi otherwise created a true world that highlighted a lot of research. His genuine writing extends to the creation of a stylistic tone, especially in the dialogue that the author built to feel old, using the vocabulary of the period, media moods and events spanning the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries in addition to the treasury mediaeval mediaeval and props. This fairy tale is a character driven. You are drawn into a well-defined three-dimensional life, and the reader deeply empathizes with their search.
