Thank you for visiting the blog Septaturan Guru 2019. The salary slip format for each company or agency does not but the difference is not too much. If by chance we work in the administration section that handles wages, there are many examples of salary slips in Excel and a word or document that we can try in making them. While the format of this salary slip varies from company to company, there are points that should be on salary slip. Many explanations about this pay slip are available online or other sources, so we can create the right slip payment format. Here we learn how to make this salary slip as well as the right example, ranging from employee pay slips, kindergarten educators, laureates and so on. As we create Pay Slip In making a pay slip, we have to list things that are usually on each pay sheet. Things that are both listed on this pay sheet as below, and for more details about the placement, can be seen later on the example of salary slip. 1. Information company information company or agencies issued to pay receipts such as company name, address, number and so on, related to the company are listed. 2. Periode Gaji On the date of this salary, each company can vary. Usually the difference is limited only to the date and is often given on the earliest dates of the month. 3. Employees' personal data Of these employees include the name, position, number of employees or employees and other identification cards that must be listed in order to be easy to award such a salary. 4. This tax information is always on each payroll sheet, because the average worker is subject to this tax deduction. Therefore, it should be provided with information so that the recipient of the salary knows how much of his net income. 5. This amount of salary includes the main thing to include in salary slip, which is to list how much of the base salary, overtime, bonuses and benefits received by employees to be clear and detailed. 6. Payroll deduction This deduction is in the form of tax deductions and some other deductions such as insurance, BPJS and other deductions. For insurance deductions and BPJS it is usually only for certain companies or employees only. 7. The last net salary is the nominal net salary earned by the employee after going through several deductions if there is a deduction. For more information, in order not to imagine how this wage slip forms, you can later see the example of salary slip. The salary slip format as described above is that the format of writing this salary slip may not be the same for any company, but the points are the same. This salary done very in detail and clearly with the columns in it, some of which are written very simply just listing the points that need to be transferred to the toll. Below is a salary slip format that is usually on each payroll sheet: 1. Name and At the top of the salary slip is always listed the name of the company as well as the logo, if any. In addition to the company name and logo, the company's address as well as the number are also specified for the full written slip of payment. 2. The Statement of Confidential Documents Partial Payment Sheet comes with an included statement of confidentiality of documents. If this statement uses the phrase Secret or Private and confidential, but many of the salary receipts are not given a description of Privacy. 3. Employee data For the staff member's personal details include the name, position, number of staff or staff and other identification cards that must be listed in order to be easy to award. Other employee identifiers commonly listed on this NIK pay sheet, as well as phone numbers. 4. The payment date for this payment date can vary for each company. Usually the difference is limited only to the date and is often given on the earliest dates of the month. Private companies often find this salary giving time not based on the date or start of the month, but at the end of the week or once a week. 5. This amount of salary includes the main thing to include in salary slip, which is to list how much of the base salary, overtime, bonuses and benefits received by employees to be clear and detailed. Also listed are payroll deductions, if any, such as taxes, insurance, BPJS and other deductions. 6. Details of salary payments in the form of base salary, bonus, allowance, and deduction, if any. So that will match the net wage of the employee. These details usually also adjust the needs of the company or agency that issues the salary. Because there are benefits, overtime and so on that are not the same for each company. The following example of Pay Slip is an example of a simple monthly salary slip for us to learn and add to our understanding of this slip pay after learning how to create and format it in the explanation above. 1. Employee's Salary Slip This employee can be an employee in the store, alfamart, notary and so on. Details of that employee's salary begin with the employee's name, how many days of work entry, the amount of salary and so on. For employees to pay receipts and similar letter format is not given a table, but recorded directly from the border line only. The average form of writing employee payroll receipts varies, but in general the element of writing a salary receipt exists and is classified as complete. Salary receipts for these employees are issued every month once, once a week, and some Week. For salary slips these employees usually adjust the policy of each company that employs these employees because they are not related Employee pay receipts also list overtime, benefits and deductions, if any.
