The goal of the PSIM version 9.1 is to fulfill the immediate needs of the user and to upgrade the previous version of PSIM. These upgrades consist of new tools to: Genome-wide identification and analysis of novel V1r-like receptors in the rat. More than 800 G protein-coupled receptors (GPCRs) have been identified in the rat genome, yet only about 30% of them are "traditional" GPCRs. The vasopressin (AVP) and oxytocin (OT) receptors are members of the V1r/V2r family of GPCRs, which also includes the glucose-sensing receptors. In the current study, we analyzed the rat genome with two bioinformatics tools, GenomeScan and ProteomeScan, to identify all members of this family and classified them into seven subfamilies (V1r-V1sr, V2r, V3r, CysL, OTR/CRF, Oxtr/CRF1r, and Galr) according to their homology with other known V1r/V2r family members. We further cloned a set of selected V1r-like receptors from total RNA of different rat tissues. Genomic PCR confirmed their expression in rats. Semi-quantitative reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction and Western blotting analysis of several brain regions indicated that the gene expression and protein levels of the V1r-like receptors varied among the tissues. These data indicate that the V1r-like receptors play important roles in the central and peripheral nervous systems and their expression levels vary among the tissues. About 600 people have been evacuated from homes on the German island of Ruegen after a nearby mine exploded, according to local authorities. The cause of the blast was not immediately clear. However, the centre of the island has been affected and at least 14 people have been injured, including eight firefighters, local police said. The 730m (2,394ft) shaft of the Rhein und Elbe underground mine has been closed, leading to the partial collapse of part of the shaft and other damage, local police said. On nearby nearby Borkum, 70 people were forced to leave their homes and beaches were closed as a precaution because of high radiation levels. "There is a massive influx of people out of the area, so everyone is on the move," said a spokesman for the ministry 520fdb1ae7
