

DANIEL PIHLSTROM

ABOUT ME

I am a general dentist and I hold a leadership role focused on implementing innovative dental treatments. I enjoy helping patients improve their overall health through coordinated dental and medical care. I also work at the Kaiser Permanente Center for Health Research on clinical research related to oral health. I get to do a lot different things — and I love it!

ABOUT MY PRACTICE

I love being a general dentist because I get to care for many types of patients. Having a positive impact on my patients' health and well-being is rewarding — plus I get to meet a lot fascinating people along the way.

HOW I THRIVE

My family is an active bunch, and we love activities that get us outdoors. I love to run and have participated in the Hood to Coast relay race for several years. I also snowboard and kite board as often as the weather and my schedule allow.

EDUCATION & TRAINING

University of Minnesota, Dental School, 2000

Oregon Health & Science University, General Practice Residency, 2001