Instatistic followers tracker for instagram apk

By Claire Edwards If you can't see all your Instagram followers when you're looking at your feed, it's possible your former followers' accounts have recently been deleted. It's also possible that the user hasn't signed your account recently. If you have more followers, you may need to use a third-party Instagram browsing service to see them all. Users can delete their own accounts at any time. Accounts can also be deleted by Instagram if it is found that the user has violated the terms of use of Instagram. If you're following someone who's deleted their account, you won't be able to see their photos on your Instagram feed anymore. However, due to a known bug in Instagram software, your apparent number of followers and subsequent accounts may remain the same. Instagram users can customize their photos to private ones if they don't want them to be public. If you and another user who has their photos set on private have been mutually following each other, and that person has now unfollowed you, you won't be able to see your photos anymore. Their photos will no longer appear on your Instagram feed. If you have more than 200 followers, Instagram won't show all the photos of 200 followers in your feed. You'll only see photos uploaded by 200 people you've contacted recently. For those who follow a large number of other users, especially if their number is more than 1000, Instagram recommends using a third-party service. Instagram's third-party viewing services use the Instagram app interface so you can see your Instagram photo feed, your likes, and all the photos of your followers online, even if there are more than 200 users in your channel. These sites allow you to log in with your Instagram account data, so you can still see photos from users who have installed their accounts privately. Examples include Webstagram, Gramfeed and Insta-Big. Khamosh Pathak When someone follows you on Instagram, you will instantly receive a notification. But what if you want to check if they follow you weeks or months down the line? Here's how to tell if someone is following you on Instagram or not. First, open the Instagram app on your iPhone or Android and go to the user profile. If you don't follow them and they follow you, you'll see the Follow button rather than the usual Follow button. If you see the Follow it button, the puzzle is solved. This person or account is following you on Instagram. But if you follow them, the button will say: After. If you want to check if they follow you, the process is a little more complicated. From their profile, click on the After Option at the top of the screen. Here you'll see a list of all the users they follow. Click on the search bar and then enter your name or Instagram handle. If your yours comes, it means they follow you. If not, it's hard luck. What if a person is watching you and you would prefer them not to see all your messages? You can try hiding your Instagram stories from them or block them altogether. ANSWER: How to block someone on Instagram When it comes to Instagram followers, quality is better than quantity. You can remove unwanted followers - such as ghost followers - from Instagram without blocking them in the first place. Ghost followers are followers who are either inactive or don't interact with you, leaving likes or comments. They can be: BotsLurkers (either strangers or people you know) Users who are only interested in getting followed back (and who end up unfollow you anyway) users who were once active but then abandoned their accounts Common Theme among all types of ghost followers is that they offer you no real value other than raising your follower count. It is a good idea to remove followers like these so that your follower count reflects your level of engagement as honestly and authentically as possible. There's no official way to remove followers from Instagram.com in a web browser. To easily remove your followers, you must have access to your Instagram account from your iOS or Android app. Open the Instagram app on your iOS or Android device and, if necessary, type in your account (or switch to an account from which you want to delete your followers). Go to your profile by clicking the person icon in the far right in the lower menu. Click on the number of subscribers that appear at the top of your profile to see your followers' list. To find a follower you want to delete, you can: scroll through the list of followers until you find them; Use the search box at the top of your followers to start typing your username or use automatic results to find your account. You have to take this step out of the list of your followers. You won't find the option of deleting a follower, go to the follower profile from anywhere in the world except the list of your subscribers. Click on three horizontal dots in the iOS app or three vertical dots in the Android app that appear to the right of the subscriber list. Click Delete from the pop-up menu to remove them as a follower. Repeat the steps from four to six to remove another follower. Users are not notified when you remove them as a follower, and it is up to them to notice on their own they are no longer following you. If they notice, keep in mind that they are free to find their account and follow you again. Once upon a time, there were many free third-party apps that could connect to your Instagram account to help you manage your followers. One of the useful things they did was allow you to remove followers in bulk. Many of these apps still exist, but today those who claim to do so are violating Instagram's API policy. Worse, apps like these be out of date or a complete fraud and may cause your account to be compromised. This may take a long time, but the security of your account depends on your willingness to manually remove followers on a case-by-case basis. If you have many followers and therefore can't track which followers interact with you and who match the role of ghost follower, you can use a service like Iconosquare (with a 14-day free trial) to see in-depth analytics of your follower involvement. Instagram.com doesn't have as many features as the app and follower removal options is one of them, but there's a simple workaround if you absolutely have to make it out of a web browser. Simply go to your follower's profile while you sign up for your account on Instagram.com, select three horizontal dots next to the blue Follow Back button, and then select that person's Block from the pop-up menu. Then select three points again and select that user's Unblock. Lock them automatically removes them as a follower, but when you unlock them, they will remain a non-follower. Just like deleting followers, followers (or any user, for that matter) are notified when you block them. This is, of course, a more time-consuming process than using the official option of removing a follower in an application because of all the extra steps. Not only do you have to go to each follower's individual profile, but you also have to take two more steps after that- block them and then immediately unlock them. When your Instagram account is public, anyone can follow you, putting you at a higher risk, followed by more accounts that just want to be able to go back and ultimately have to ignore your content. If you want to make it easier for new followers to show up, consider making your Instagram private. This way, users will have to send you a follow-up request that you have to approve before they can handle you. If the user who sends you the next request is a complete stranger, has very promotional content or appears to be following a large number of users towards their follower count, then they will probably end up ghost follower and you are better off reducing them to follow the request. Instagram makes the art of photography accessible to everyone. With just a few phone screen taps, you can capture everyday moments, dress them up with a cool filter, and share them with the world. While you'll find all kinds of content on Instagram, you're ever curious which accounts are most Let's look at the top ten most popular Instagram accounts, which makes their profiles irresistible, and whether to follow each one. You can keep up with these people, or maybe just need inspiration to make your own posts better. 10. Justin Bieber Followers: 91.7 Million Following: 70 We Start With Love-His or-Hate-His Music Star Music It's certainly not a stretch to say Justin Bieber is an experienced musician. He's one of the best-selling artists of all time, and the second most followed account on Twitter after Katy Perry. On the other hand, his music video for Baby is still the most unloved YouTube video of all time. Bieber's Instagram feed is pretty active. His latest photos mostly photos of himself along with tons of snapshots of fans wearing his new merchandise. There aren't any particularly interesting photography feats to see here. Should you follow? Anyone who likes to see endless pictures of Justin Bieber (teenage girls) will be in heaven with this page. If you don't care about Bieber's music or face, there's not much to enjoy here. 9. Dwayne Scala Johnson Followers: 93.8 million Following: 174 The only actor in the Instagram Hall of Fame. Dwayne Scala Johnson was the first highly successful professional wrestler. On the silver screen, he is known for his role in the TV series Fast and Furious. He has even starred in several children's films and will be in the upcoming sequel Jumanji. Rock's Instagram channel is quite dynamic. He often uses the Instagram video feature to interact and speak directly to his viewers. Recently, excerpts from his projects and short videos about current events appeared on his page. Should you follow? If you hate Dwayne Johnson, movies and wrestling, The Rock Score is worth the following. He seems like a great guy and his page is fun. 8. Kylie Jenner Followers: 97.6 million Following: 160 Youngest of the Kardashian-Jenner crew, Kylie is famous for her fame. Along with the rest of her family, she appeared on the reality show Foot with the Kardashians, which is somehow still on television. This prompted her to many spin-off shows, along with some modeling work and a line of cosmetics and accessories with her sister Kendall. Jenner's popular Instagram feed contains mostly photos of herself, along with some promotion for her cosmetic products. Many of her selfies include her wearing swimwear, workout gear, and other such sexy outfits, no doubt bringing many men into her follower count. Should you follow? If the Kardashians don't make you sick and you want to see pictures of Kylie Jenner all the time, this is the place for you. 7. Kim Kardashian Followers: 103 Million Following: 113 Kim Kardashian is another whose fame defies logic. She first attracted attention through an association with Paris Hilton. In 2007, her sex tape with rapper Ray J was leaked, and later that year Keeping Up debuted. Since then, the public has been inexplicably obsessed with her every move, including her current marriage to rapper Kanye West. Her Instagram page, to her surprise, is mostly filled with photos of her famous voluptuous figure. Also from time to time shares photos of cats, sky and other essential products of Instagram. Instagram. Are you following? Not keeping up with the Kardashians not enough Kim for you? If so, you should definitely follow her on Instagram. 6. Taylor Swift Followers: 103 million Following: 0 Another musical superstar who doesn't need a performance, Taylor Swift got her start with country music and has since moved to more pop sound. Her songs, often focused on her own life and relationships, were highly praised from each album. She has several records for being the youngest person to perform a musical feat, such as Winning Album of the Year. Her Instagram page is currently in an interesting state, however. In August 2017, she deleted all of her photos to draw attention to her new album and first single. The stunt seems to have worked, as she has kept her massive tally of followers. Since then, it has only posted several times. They mainly promote the upcoming album and exclusive service Taylor Swift NOW. Should you follow? If you're a Fan of Taylor Swift and want the first details about your new album, you should follow him here. 5. Beyonce Followers: 106 Million Following: 0 Beyonce Knowles-Carter is another pop music powerhouse. As part of the girl group Destiny's Child, she became famous. After starring in Goldmember and her solo album debut, the smash single Crazy in Love set her on a fast track to become a wildly popular solo artist. Like most other celebrities, most of Beyonce's photos are about herself. She also recently posted several photos in support of the victims of Hurricane Harvey, as she was raised in Houston. Interestingly, we couldn't find any links to the Nintendo DS game she loved so much. Should you follow? If you like Beyonce, look at her feed. Those who don't care about her don't really have a reason to do so. 4. Cristiano Ronaldo Followers: 111 million Following: 387 Unique people on this list, Cristiano Ronaldo is not a musician, actor, or Kardashian.
