[2016/06/18] 20 years the release of film 'Interstellar' released! When a young boy, a scientist. Tuesday, June 17, 2008 Even if I don't have the skill or desire to show my husband what I've learned over the past week, I do have time to write about the fact that I've finished my first stitchy project! For years I've wanted to make the Great Lake Block by JoAnn's that my friend Mary bought for me for my birthday. I finally put it together on Monday! It took me most of the day, but I finished! There is one other block in the package that I'd like to make next, but I'll have to save it for another day. I also finished sewing up the fabric for a lap quilt for my mom! I'm so happy that I can give her a gift she can actually use and enjoy! Here is a shot of the finished quilt. Thursday, June 12, 2008 I've been quilting. No, I haven't been quilting. I started! I made myself a new, hopefully better batting, and I've cut out a bunch of fabric for the kids quilt that I mentioned in this entry. I had no idea what I was going to do when I got them in my hands. I like to just sit down and let the pattern start to develop and then finish it off. This time I started with the jelly roll quilts I've been using for baby quilts. I really have been using my best friends, Liesl and Jenny's patterns. The patterns are wonderful and give the quilts you would expect of a "pattern company" but with simple piecing patterns that even a beginner can figure out how to make. Here is a picture of some of the patterns that I've used. After cutting out all of my fabric, I started working on the first one. My eyes are definitely bigger than my skill level, but I'm getting better. I think I'd like to find a pattern and work with that for the next one that I make. A lot of the other things that I've been doing have been a lot easier, but I think if I just pick one and work with it, I'll get better and better with each one. So what have I been up to? Here are some other pictures of some of the things that I've been doing. Making the bed in our new 520fdb1ae7
