It also depends on your relationship with your boss. Anyway, never give money. If you don't think of anything else, a gift card for something you know they will enjoy is appropriate. Yes, it could be. While you shouldn't feel obliged to give your boss a Christmas present, this can be a nice gesture. Simply avoid spending too much or making a public display of your gift-giving unless the office has a gift exchange tradition. Yes. If the rest of the office is chipping in, it may come out the wrong way if you don't participate. However, a group gift doesn't have to be expensive, as long as it's thoughtful. See our faves for budget, realistic, small spaces and more. Where to buy a Thanksgiving turkey These top online stores have fresh and frozen turkey on plus holiday sides, desserts and more. See which stores offer same-day delivery and additional savings. Amazon The holidays are a moment to think about. Because this year is more complicated than most (to say the least), it is mainly mainly to show your appreciation to the people who have been with you through all this, starting with your boss. Throughout the year, they've provided reassurance, inspiration and some much-needed laughter, keeping you on your toes to complete assignments, chart your next career step, and more. For all these reasons and more, browse through these gifts for your boss to find something that best expresses your gratitude this Christmas. No matter if they're in or out of the office, they can use these top-rated finds, especially since many of them are suitable ways to spruce up their home desk or make working from home more bearable (think: a constant coffee offering). Along with a few inspiring finds for your #boss lady, some of these gift ideas will help bring out their funny side (and shed a light on yours!). Since quarantine can prevent you from seeing your boss IRL this holiday season, we've made sure to have various gift baskets and virtual ideas that can be delivered directly to their door – no packaging or shipping on your part. FYI: Certain items may be shipped later this year due to the pandemic. Check here at all shipping times to make sure your item arrives in time for the holidays. 1 of 29 for every female boss who inspires Boss Lady Candle Sweet Water Decor amazon.com/handmade $20.00 Every time she lights this creamy jasmine candle, she will be reminded how much of a boss she really is.
